ABOUT THE FIELD HUNTER

Foxhunting is the sport of mounted riders chasing wild quarry with a pack of hounds. It is the union of humans and animals in the beauty of nature's setting.

Mounted foxhunting has been an integral part of rural life in the United States for centuries. Fox hunting in North America began as early as 1650. Much of what is recorded about early hunting comes from the diaries of George Washington, who was an ardent foxhunter and had his own pack of hounds.

Foxhunting continues to thrive today with some 160 clubs across the US and Canada has evolved and today the emphasis is placed on the chase and not the kill.

Over the centuries, the sport Foxhunting flourishes entirely because of the goodwill of landowners and farmers. Riders are constantly aware that they are guests on someone else's land and strive to do nothing to jeopardize this goodwill.

Tradition governs every aspect of the sport. From the attire worn by the rider to the turnout of the horse, each piece of clothing or saddlery has special significance.

Fox hounds are scent hounds and "speak" when they pick up the scent of the game, typically coyote, fox and bobcat in the south. The thrill of galloping across the countryside following a pack of hounds in "full cry," is breathtaking to all who partake.

The most important quality of a suitable hunting horse is safety. The horse should go quietly in a group, stop without a fight, stand patiently at checks (where hounds have lost the scent and go looking for it, with the huntsman helping them along), wait their turn at jumps, and jump without refusal.

ABOUT THE FIELD HUNTER

Horses should always present at the hunt (meet) clean, neatly trimmed and properly tacked up. One of the more gratifying aspects of participating in this sport is the time invested in making sure you and your mount are well "put together." These attributes will be judged today.

Today will begin with the hounds and huntsman on a run. After this will be a "mock hunt" where the huntsman will pretend to follow the hounds on a normal day. This will start as hounds in full cry, with the riders galloping behind.

You will likely hear different sounds of the horn. Different calls tell both hounds and the riders what's going on and where the pack is located.

Our judges will be looking for the field hunter they find most desirable for themselves to ride in the field, noting all the characteristics mentioned above.
